Phils Phinkings

There's two or three different approaches to Trip planning.

There's the 'Slave of the Spreadsheet'. The person who has it all planned, out to the last minute and gets a little agitated if anyone wants to spontaneously spend any extra time doing anything that throws out the schedule.

Then there's the 'No plans for plans' person, who just 'wings' it and goes with the flow. I think most of us are somewhere in the middle, although it seems it's getting harder and harder to just show up somewhere and expect to be able to find a spare campsite and even more difficult to book if you don't have phone signal. It also allows for the occasional loss of traction (getting bogged) or some unplanned exploring (getting lost).

I love the thought of travelling without any plans, but the reality is that you need to vary your approach depending on your location. From most reports, it's essential to book just about anywhere in the Kimberly or West Aust coast during our southern winter, however, you can still be a little spontaneous down in Tasmania, particularly if you prefer to be a little off-grid.

*Phil Simes,
President*

Phils Phinkings

I only know this as I plan for a possible trip down to the apple isle myself. There I go planning again! (But I recently had a planned weekend away scuttled by that Covid thing, so I had a bit of time on my hands)

Anyway, I look forward to reading about the exploits of everyone else who still managed to get away. The next best thing to getting away on a trip, is reading about someone else who been away, followed by planning for my own next trip.

So if you've been somewhere, even if it wasn't with the club, consider putting a few words and pics together and let us live vicariously through your experience. I'd love to hear all about it.

See you at the next meeting.

Phil.

Trip Report

Big Desert Wilderness Park 24th - 26th June

Attendees:

Gary Light (Trip Leader)..... Toyota Prado
Ian and Vanessa Toyota HiLux
Burgo..... Toyota Troopy
Les Scott..... Landcruiser 200
Mark and Lisa Landcruiser 80
Trevor and Lynn..... Nissan Patrol
Glen..... Nissan Patrol
Dave..... Toyota Prado

With the car packed we headed off a little behind schedule after some last minute babysitting duties took a little longer than first thought. We stopped for a coffee at Taillem Bend and a fuel stop at Pinnaroo before we reached our destination, Big Billy Bore camping area in the Big Desert State Forest. This has become somewhat of an annual pilgrimage for the club thanks to Gary Light. Big Billy Bore was originally installed in the 1800's and was used by stockman to water their stock as they drove them from Nhill Station to Kow Station. It's a generous size campground with good facilities about 3 ½ hours from home.

A few of the crew had already arrived and setup when we got there and the discussion amongst us all got straight down to business.... who is doing the trip report! Now while we weren't the last ones there (the normal criteria for this task) it was decided that it wasn't fair to lob this onto one of the 'newbies' who were actually the last to arrive!

The weather was kind (no rain) but it was on the chilly side so a warming fire, a bevvie of choice, and cooking some dinner was the order of business. Its always good to see different ways others cook over the fire. Burgo's home made foldable grill plate was in use and he demonstrated a unique way of cooking an egg (in a patty pan with a can as a lid, perfectly cooked and no washing up).

Highlight of the evening were the delicious scones, jam and cream Vanessa and Ian cooked on the camp fire.... such a treat!

Trip Report

For those interested the secret recipe is:
3 parts self-raising flour
1 part cream
1 part lemonade.

Pre-warm the camp oven to 200C
(when the baking paper starts to go
black!) and cook until they sound
'hollow' when you tap the top.

Saturday kicked off around 9:00. First challenge for the day was a 'warm up' dune just off the main road opposite the Delisio Track entrance. What was supposed to be a straight forward climb actually caught a few of the group off guard with the top of the dune being on the soft side and having to negotiate a tight right hand turn at the crest. A few drivers were seen reaching for the deflators for a second attempt at getting the right tyre pressures! After some adjustments to pressures we all managed to negotiate the dune and so we headed off for the more serious challenge... Big Dune!

Our first challenge for the day

Dave tearing it up!

Trip Report

The tracks through the State Forest had seen some traffic in recent times and were in places quite chopped up. Big Dune is a somewhat daunting task when you look at it from the bottom. Multiple tracks have been made up it at various stages over the years varying in difficulty from medium to hard to un-driveable. This didn't put us off from having a go; testing the various lines in our attempts to reach the top. By the time we had all had our fun we had a handful of cars who had mastered the climb by one of two lines that were conquered. The other lines will have to wait for another time!

Les on his way to the top of Big Dune... no stopping that 200!

We continued on our way along some more of the sandy and in places muddy tracks. While most of us kept well away from the mud Dave didn't hesitate at having a go. We found a pleasant spot for lunch and stretched our legs for a bit. Some more driving after lunch took us to an area which had multiple tracks up and down a reasonable sized dune. This gave us all a chance to test our vehicles abilities some more. The approach to the dune was quite chopped up and made it challenging to get the momentum needed at times.

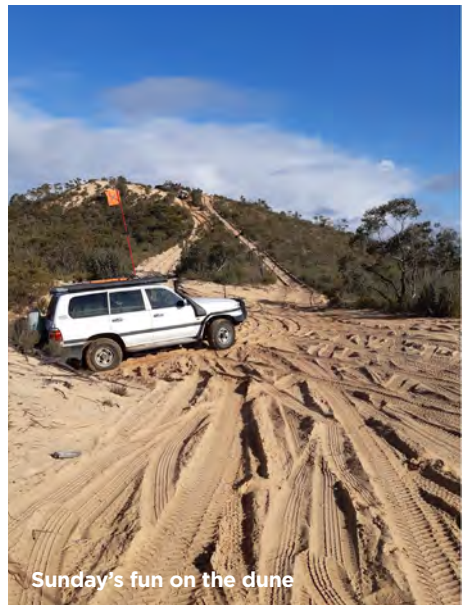

Trip Report

Lunch

Once we were all done playing there we continued back to camp via the Firetrack for happy hour under the shelter followed by another warming camp fire and more scones for supper to finish off a memorable day.

Sunday was moving day; we all packed up and were on the road by 9:00 to make our way back home via some more tracks in the direction of Cactus Bore which was another of the Govt sunk bores in the area used to provide water to the farmers who originally ran sheep in the area. A couple of nice dunes along the way and some spectacular 360 degree views from the high points made the morning drive an enjoyable one.

Sunday's fun on the dune

Trip Report

Lunch at Red Gum and then on to the intersection with the Border track to finish off the trip. We all aired up our tyres and said our goodbyes at this point before heading off; some straight home, others having the luxury of taking their time!

Another great weekend and a great way to meet some more wonderful new members.

Thanks to Gary for organising the trip; looking forward to next years already!

UHF Channels

For long-distance travellers, an ultra-high frequency citizen band (UHF CB) radio is an essential device. This is especially true if you go beyond the wilderness and bushland, and get all the way to the remote Australian outback where phone reception is weak to totally non-existent.

If you do happen to run into any trouble (e.g. your vehicle breaks down or you get lost), you can use your trusty UHF CB radio to get help or access emergency services.

If you're planning to go on a grand tour of the outback or to explore the bushland, this handy guide to Australian UHF channels will guide you through using your radio on the right channels.

UHF explained

Although the service is technically available to everyone, not all CB radio channels are allowed for use by just anyone for whatever reason. In fact, the penalties can be pretty stiff for anyone caught misusing certain UHF radio channels.

For example, people can face imprisonment or a hefty fine for the general misuse of the legally allocated UHF emergency channel, or a few hundred dollars for minor cases.

Therefore, it helps to know about CB radio channels in general, as well as legally restricted channels and proper UHF CB radio etiquette.

UHF Channels

UHF channels for general use

Below is information from the Australian UHF channel chart you can refer to so you know which channel you should leave your CB radio on by default for general use:

Channel 18 for caravan owners/campers: If you own a 4x4 off-road camping truck or caravan, this is how people will find you in case something falls off the side of your camper along the way. This channel is for general use for off-road adventurers.

Channel 10 for 4WD clubs or convoys: This is the default general use channel, except if your club chooses to use a different channel (eg: MLR uses channel 27). It is also commonly referred to as the national parks channel.

Channel 40 commonly used by truck or oversized vehicle drivers: This channel is Australia's main road safety resource.

If you need to contact another camper or caravan owner, or a truck or 4WD driver, you can switch to the above channels (18, 10 and 40) as these are all shared channels and accessible to everyone.

That being said, there are other CB radio channels you can switch to for specific public information.

Channel 5 (or 35 – a repeater output channel) for emergencies only: In case you or someone in your convoy is hurt or injured and there are no other means of communication, channel 5 is the one you should use to get assistance. Both channels 5 and 35 are legislated by the Australian government and are reserved exclusively for emergency use. Any misuse, once proven, can lead to prosecution or substantial penalties.

General use channels: If you have a camper convoy with your friends, you can agree to switch on most channels for general use. For the general band, you can choose from channels 9, 12 to 17, 19 to 21, 24 to 30, and 39. If your radios have extended bands, you can select from channels 50 to 60, 64 to 70, and 79 to 80.

UHF Channels

Legally restricted UHF channels

The channels below are legislated as a part of the Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA) UHF CB Class Licence. Any misuse or abuse of these channels is subject to penalties.

- Channels 5 and 35 are reserved for emergency use.
- Channel 11, the designated 'call channel', is meant only for initiating calls but not for discussions or conversations.
- Channels 22 and 23 are allocated exclusively for telemetry and telecommand use or automated data communications.
- Channels 61, 62 and 63 are reserved for future allocation, so voice transmissions are not allowed.

The sophisticated technology available today makes it easy to triangulate the location of any UHF radio user found to be abusing or misusing these channels. Therefore, it makes sense to stay off these frequencies - especially CB emergency channels when not in an emergency.

UHF CB radio etiquette

Aside from keeping off legislated or legally restricted channels 22, 23, 61, 62 and 63, you can only use channel 5 (or 35) and 11 when it is absolutely necessary.

Note that all communications on public channels can be heard by any user (or a repeater you are using) within range, so they can also join in. However, UHF CB radio users are generally well-behaved and observe proper etiquette.

If you know that the channel you are using is already being used (especially by locals in the area), show your courtesy by moving to another frequency.

There may be instances when you encounter trolls and new users who don't know yet how to behave. In such cases, just avoid trolls (which are rare) and politely inform newbies about radio etiquette, so they know better.

Fun and safe travels with your UHF radio

The UHF CB radio offers an enjoyable and unique way of staying connected with your friends, camping group or convoy. More importantly, it is an essential communication device you can use during emergencies.

So, to get the best use out of your UHF CB radio, consider the information and tips above next time you are out exploring.

MLR End of Year Event

Saturday
26th November
Blyth Sportsground
and RV Park

We have negotiated use of the toilet and shower facilities from the Footy Club at $15 per head for the weekend, as well as the use of the pavilion/clubrooms in case of extreme weather. (Fees are payable to our Treasurer Kylie either through EFT or ca$h, if paying by EFT please insert 'your name' and 'Blyth event' to your reference)

MLR will provide dinner catered by Maps Mobile Pizza Ovens on Saturday night.

There's plenty to do in the Clare Valley and surrounds for the weekend, so get your name on the trip sheet and pay Kylie your $15 per head to ensure your spot!

Please note: the per head charge is in lieu of a hire fee for the toilet, shower and pavilion facilities. Camping is free, however a donation to the RV Park for future development is optional.
